International Order and World Politics

PROF. ALESSANDRO QUARENGHI

OVERVIEW

Area: International Relations
Dates: 22 June - 3 July (2 weeks)
Campus: Milan
Course number: IR/PO320su
Term: Summer 2020
Credits: 6 ECTS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

The course aims to provide students with essential tools to understand some of the most pressing issues in contemporary international order, in its relation to world order, from an international relations theory perspective.

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be familiar both from a theoretical and empirical perspective with the features and working mechanisms of the main models of international order. In addition, students will be aware of the main concepts of the most established approaches in International Relations Theory and will be able to employ them to interpret some of the main issues in contemporary international politics. Finally, they will be familiar with some of the most important issues shaping contemporary politics and the contemporary international order.

COURSE CONTENTS

The course is divided in main two parts. In its first part, the course focuses on an overview of features and working mechanisms of the main models of international order: the balance of power in its multipolar and bipolar (and unipolar) variants, the hegemonic, and the constitutional models, assessing their theoretical features against their historical record. While exploring the models of order, it sketches the most established International Relations Theory approaches and their understanding of the models of order. The second part of the course will discuss some of the most relevant issues in the contemporary politics: the decline of US power and the rise of China, the re-creation of a multipolar balance of power, the role and future of the European Union, Globalization as a transformative process and the reaction to it with the rise of anti-modern/Western/liberal/Global capitalism actors, the contemporary threats to international security, the new forms of warfare, the role of the State in the international order, and the challenge to international order from civil society and the efforts to create a global movement.

METHOD OF TEACHING

The first part of the course will consist of lectures. In the second part of the course, and depending on the number of students, some sessions will be introduced by a student or groups’ presentation (20-25 minutes), which can be supported by the assigned readings. The issues raised by the presentation and by the essential readings will foster a discussion led by the instructor, which will constitute the bulk of the class. The instructor will then conclude by briefly (10-15 minutes) summarizing the most important points made during the discussion.
COURSE REQUIREMENTS

a. Students are expected to regularly attend sessions and to actively take part in debate;
b. Before each class, students are expected to have read the compulsory readings (and are strongly advised to read the recommended readings);
c. Students are required to orally present one of the topics outlined in the syllabus according to the instructor’s instructions;
d. Students will have to take a final written exam.
