The course is organized in three main intertwined learning moments:

1. An “exploratory” session, aimed at setting a common ground illustrating the basics of brand communication (namely, the concept of brand, brand identity, brand positioning, brand equity and their meaning in the brand management process)
2. A “diving” session, aimed at sharing and discussion how innovative and unconventional brand communication initiatives can support brands in engaging and activating consumers as dialogical partners
3. A “field” session, in which students are required to take part in consumer-brand relationship analysis and brand communication co-creation processes

Method Of Teaching
The course is based both on theoretical lectures in order to provide a conceptual framework of the topics described above, and on practical assignments as well as field trips. More specifically the “exploratory” session is conceived as a conceptual settle down of brand management basics, supported by examples. The “diving” session is represented by an interplay between theory, anecdotal evidence, and students’ active learning, throughout team work in class and group assignments. Finally, the “field” session is rooted in practice-based experience of field analysis, company visits, and case study generation. Reading materials will also be provided on-line to allow students going more in depth in the subject matter. Students will be evaluated based on their active participation in class, their effectiveness in the accomplishment of the ongoing assignments, and their ability to analyze and report innovative brand communication case studies.
