A Fashion Brand: From Line Creation to Market Placement. A Case Study

PROF. MARGHERITA PAGLIA

Area of study:	Fashion and Design
Area Code:	IB/CM320
Method of Instruction:	In-person

Description

The first part of the course provides an overview of making fashion. It starts from iconographic studies, it includes knowing how to read images and it ends with playing with colours and understanding their meanings. In this part of the course students have to understand what a brand is and where it has to be placed, using marketing tools, merchandising skills and communication awareness. The second part is a "Point in" through communication. We will analyze some different paths like verbal and non-verbal communication. Through role-plays and team works we will go deeper into old and new networks for example paper and social networks. The last part of the course focuses on the function of products in fashion: we will create a new product and students have to recreate its universe studying new mood boards, concept boards, target and marketing plans. All this is fundamental for the fashion and will create a real awareness of it. A great role is played by practical work and referring to a newly born and established brand, the students will have the possibility to apply theories to a practical field and they will be exposed to problem solving situations related to real cases relating to the fashion world.
